Prophet's Services Won (Va. 23-31).
—Gehazi would not do! The Shunaminite must have Elisha. Gehazi's part in this story is suggestive of the him drances which may lie in the pathway of the secker after God, of the fatullity of human means to restore life. It reminds us of the disciples' failure to heal the demonas on and of the final appeal to Jesus (Luke 9: 83-43). Why should we be content with the Gehazi where we may have the Christ Himself?

boll-weevil are greatly to be feared in

The incorporation at Albany of a company to furnish election statistics and predictions might seem to threaten one of the proudest prerogatives of the American citizen. Is even the privilege of saying "I tell you, sir," and "I told you so," before and after election, to be monopolized by a trust? The danger, however, is less real than apparent. Even the greatest ever steel trust is not able to shut out opposition and finds itself to-day with a cut-rate war on its hands. The small producer cannot be wholly eliminated from any industry. Least of all can he be controlled in the resistless tidal output of prophecy. Including non-voters who have an interest in politics, there are 45,000,000 political prophets in the United States, says the N. Y. World. The horseback and with a dignified salute said to the confederate officer: raw material of their industry-the hot air of the waning summer and the sunset glow of hope-cannot be cornered. Vermont? It cannot be done! One of the "lessons" which military science was supposed to have learned from the war in South Africa was that artillery could accomplish nothing in field operations that could not be more cheaply and expeditionaly effected by rifle fire. The comparatively small dampositions after hours of bombardment with highly explosive shells was cited as evidence that all field guns, except those of the smaller machine types, cost more than they were worth. The record of the Russo-Japanese war disproves this claim.
